More Hints from the Model Garage

Don't throw away an old oil pump. You can make a handy little pump from it that will have a good many uses; for instance, regreasing a rear axle. The bent pushrod acts as a crank; the pipe is for suction, the hose for delivery.

When a brake light won't function and the parking lights come on instead, check the bulb. One filament in a dual-filament bulb can short it internally. A half-melted filament support may fuse to a good filament and switch the current.
